HISTORICAL COCKTAIL

Americano

1000

Campari, vermouth, soda water

A truly classic cocktail, the Americano was first served in the 1860s at Gaspare Campari's bar in Milan, Italy. It was originally named "Milano-Torino" because of the origins of its two primary ingredients: Campari calls Milan home and sweet vermouth is also known as 'Vermouth di Torino' or Italian vermouth.

Negroni

1000

Gin, vermouth, Campari

It is widely believed that the Negroni was created and named for Count Camillo Negroni in the 1920s. The story goes that the drink was invented when he ordered an Americano with gin at Cafe Casoni in Florence, Italy.

Daiquiri

1000

White rum, lime juice, simple syrup

The Daiquiri is thought to have been developed in the late 1800s in Cuba. It was either created as a medicinal treatment or in a "there's no whiskey or gin around here...time to doctor up the local rum" type of scenario. As is often the case with cocktails, we do not know for sure which is the truth and it is likely that both renditions have some element of the truth. Probably the most famous daiquiri lover was Ernest Hemingway. He also happens to have a variation named after him.

Manhattan

1000

Rye Whisky, red vermouth, angostura

The original Manhattan was made with rye whisky. However, there was a period in the 1900s when rye was not readily available or as high quality as Manhattan requires. During these decades, it became common practice to use Canadian whiskey. When bourbon began to reclaim headlines in the last decades of the 20th century, that became a popular choice and was the newly preferred whiskey for a Manhattan.

White lady

1000

Gin, triple sec, lemon juice

The White Lady was originally created by famous bartender Harry McElhone while he was working at London's Ciro Club in 1919. At that time, he used equal parts of white crème de menthe, triple sec and lemon juice. It was not until he had his own Harry's New York Bar in Paris, which he bought in 1923, that he adapted the recipe by swapping the crème de menthe with gin, still using equal parts.
